Hiring Team, Analyst, Access to Information and Privacy (R4116)

Ottawa, ON

Re: Application for Analyst, Access to Information and Privacy (R4116)

PSP invests for the pensions of the federal public service, the Canadian Armed Forces, the Reserve Force, and the RCMP, and as a federal Crown corporation it carries access-to-information and privacy obligations alongside commercially sensitive investment work. That combination makes ATIP at PSP a more interesting analyst seat than most: requests have to be answered fully and on time, under statutes that do not bend, in an organization where what can and cannot be released takes real judgment. That is the seat I am applying for.

Deciding what information can be disclosed, to whom, and under what authority is my current day job. At IRCC's Operations Support Centre I apply IRPA and the Privacy Act to controlled information-sharing decisions, handle flagged privacy breaches, and coordinate corrective action with internal teams and overseas missions. Each decision is documented so it can stand up to review later. I also verify records before anything is released: I confirm citizenship status against naturalization and revocation records, citing supporting documentation for downstream officers and partner programs.

I should be candid that I have not processed formal ATIP requests. What I do daily is the program side of the same statutes: severing what can be shared from what cannot, verifying the record first, and managing a national intake queue against deadlines without letting accuracy slip. The request-processing workflow and the case law around exemptions would be new; the judgment underneath them would not be.

Where I see myself helping PSP's ATIP team: first, throughput with care, because I triage a national intake of identity-correction requests daily and know how to balance urgency against capacity; second, documentation, because in a concurrent research role I authored the team's consolidated SOP and compliance checklist and maintained a regulatory change log, so when the team needs its own procedures tightened or a tracking process improved, that is work I have done from both sides, not just followed. I track my own casework in Excel pivot analyses and am completing the Google Data Analytics Professional Certificate, which helps when reporting on request volumes and timelines.

I hold an active Reliability Status, I am based in Ottawa, and I work in English and Arabic natively with working knowledge of French. I would be glad to walk through any of this, including how I handle a borderline disclosure call, in a screen.

Sincerely,

Husam Ahmed
